Several of the former residents of Vermont who now reside in South Pasadena, Cal., met one evening recently and organized a society known as the Vermont Society of South Pasadena. It was voted to hold a sugar party as soon as possible and the secretary was instructed to obtain some pure maple sugar. The instruction was carried out and the secretary, W. L. Jacobs, purchased of Mr. N. M. Scott of this place several pails of very fine sugar, and the ex-Vermonters proceeded to "sweeten up." About 150 people were present, Pasadena, Los Angeles and other neighboring cities being well represented. After a short program consisting of music and speaking, the visitors were invited to take seats at the long tables which had been prepared. Plain doughnuts, pickles, dried beef, and the other necessary "fixings" were found in abundance and for a time it seemed to the Vermonters present that they had been transferred to their old homes in the Green Mountain state. Only one important matter had been overlooked by the committee in charge of the work; through an oversight no one arranged with the clerk of the weather for the snow which always adds to the pleasure of a Vermont sugar party and as a result it was necessary to send a hurried call to the ice men who furnished ice on which to wax the sugar. While the party was composed almost entirely of Vermonters a few stray "tenderfeet" from some of the small states were present and one party was heard to say, turning to a Vermont present, "I want to buy some maple sugar another year, can you recommend some special brand?" "Yes," the other replied, "the Vermont brand." After the refreshments had disappeared the speaking was resumed and some very fine bouquets were thrown at Old Vermont, the remarks generally showing that while these people reside in the state of their adoption they still retain loving memories of their native state. An invitation from the Pasadena society was read inviting the members of the South Pasadena association to meet with them for a banquet on Tuesday evening, June 8th. The party broke up at a late hour, each member feeling that he had enjoyed a very pleasant evening, renewed old acquaintances and formed many new friendships.

Two very interesting games of ball took place here last week. One was on Friday afternoon between the High school and Grammar grade. After eleven innings the grammar school won out by a score of 8 to 7. On Saturday afternoon, another eleven inning game took place. The game was at Skinner's Athletic park, between Island Pond and Barton Landing teams, and was called at the end of the eleventh inning because of the rain, and neither side can claim the victory as the score stood 11 to 11.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK AT BARTON LANDING.

Commencement here last week was a pleasant succession of exercises. Sunday evening Rev. W. C. Newell of Newport preached an eloquent and impressive sermon to the class, taking for his theme "The Aristocracy of Character" and interpreting it in a message of rare merit.

The commencement exercises at the High School began last Tuesday night with a prize speaking contest. This was held in the Opera house and was attended by a large number. The speaking was excellent, and all of those who participated are entitled to much praise for their meritorious work. The first speaker was Miss Florence Louise Somers, whose selection was "The Death of Steerforth," by Charles Dickens. Robert Robinson Edson delivered "Storming of Mission Ridge." The other selections were "Jerry, the Bobbin Boy," adapted, Dora Agnes Edson; Quartet, African Melody, Noll, Misses Lothrop; "The Gray Champion," Hawthorne, Jesse Sumner Barrows; "Doom of Claudius and Cynthia," Thompson, Raymond Charles Kimball; "Sally Ann's Experience," Hall, Enna Mable Goss; Solo, "Twas but a Dream," Tunison, Miss Lilla O. Lothrop; "Capture of Major Andre," Dewey, Emery Willis Lothrop; "In Stony Clove," Thurston, Marion Frances Ordway. The judges were Rev. Mr. McDonald of Evansville, Arthur E. Warner of Newport, and Mrs. Fred Pierce of Barton. The work of the judges in selecting the winners was not an easy one, but finally they awarded the prizes as follows: Girls, first, Miss Enna Mabel Goss; second, Miss Marion Frances Ordway; Boys, first, Raymond Charles Kimball; second, Jesse Sumner Barrows. The first prizes were $5, and the second prizes $2. The ushers were Grace E. Goring, Glen Willey, E. Gertrude Bennett, Charbel P. Sheldon, Lyman K. Heath and Fred E. Scott.

Wednesday afternoon the class day exercises were held in the Congregational church. Class history, prophecy and will caused much merriment among the audience, while the class poem, "Retrospection," by Gertrude L. Lyon showed excellent talent in the writer. Miss Lettie N. Marshall's essay was on the "Future of Barton Landing" and showed what might be expected to happen in the next twenty years.

A reception was given to the senior class by the members of the school Wednesday evening in the opera house. A program of music and recitations was carried out. Refreshments were served and the village orchestra was in attendance. It will be remembered by all present as one of the most pleasant features of the week. Thursday afternoon the grammar school held graduating exercises in the Congregational church. The class consisted of twelve and was the first to thus commemorate the close of the work in the 9th grade. Following is the program: Salutatory with essay, "The Beauties of Nature," Alice B. Card; essay, "The Indians," Bertha H. Dutton; oration, "Wireless Telegraphy," Karl S. Webster; solo, "Mission of the Rose," Ruth M. Skinner; Essay, "Longfellow," Alice M. Miller; prophecy, "Pictures in the Firelight," Susie I. Ford; oration, "Names of Pioneers," Thayer S. Townsend; essay, "Russian Peasantry," Ruth M. Skinner; cello solo, Karl S. Webster; essay, "The Johnstown Flood," Lulu C. Moulton; oration, "The Eastern War," Charles A. Harris; essay with valedictory, "Importance of Little Things," Grace W. Martin; presentation of diplomas, Prin. C. H. Hall. These exercises were carefully prepared and reflected much credit upon the class and their teacher, Miss Elizabeth Jones. Thursday evening was given over to class dinner at the Valley House, about 20 enjoying the event.

The graduating exercises were held at the Opera house, Friday and were well attended by the townspeople. After opening music by Miss Sadie Lothrop and Will Sylvester, prayer was offered by Rev. S. G. Lewis. The salutatory was given by Miss Lettie N. Marshall, with an essay on "Jewels." She spoke not only of material jewels as the ruby and diamond, but told of the value of the jewels of truth, friendship and wisdom, and showed how we should strive to obtain these and keep them without a plan. Her essay was interspersed with apt quotations and taught many a good lesson. "Russia and Japan" was the subject chosen by Carrie M. Wells. After comparing the two nations, she briefly gave the cause and history of the first year of the present war, concluding with the thought that peace would, soon be brought about and the effect of the conflict would be to diminish the possibility of wars in the future. Next on the program was a solo for contralto, "The Pilgrim's Dream," by Sadie Dickey-Simpson, of Nashua, N. H. Her rich, low voice caused enthusiasm among the audience, and she sang a charming little encore "If you had been born on an April Day." Miss Gertrude M. Clark delivered an essay on "Wordsworth," showing that though he is not a popular poet, his works should be studied and the benefits would be to render one nobler and more susceptible to the teachings of nature. "The Value of High School Training," delivered by Dora Ellen Willey, answered effectively the question so often raised, "What is the use of going through High School?" She showed the benefits of studying Latin, Modern Languages and Literature, making it clear that a well-educated person performs each and every task better than an uneducated. Mrs. Simpson then gave "Love, the Pedlar," in delightful style, responding to an encore with an original composition which was heartily applauded. The essay "Incentives to Effort," was given by Gertrude L. Lyon with valedictory. Her thought was very clear and she showed how patriotism, ambition and love of money prompt men to exert themselves, but best of all motives, is the love of parents, family and friends. She closed with the hope that the class would be true to the highest incentives inspired in that most sacred place, the home. The diplomas were presented by Prin. C. F. Hall representing the school authorities. Taken altogether the exercises of the week were very satisfactory and can not fail to convince anyone of the excellence of our schools and of their helpful influence on the community.
